

In a Test, a Reason to Talk

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Selig S. Harrison

Source The Washington Post

Date October 10, 2006

URL <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2006/10/09/AR2006100901035.html>

Quote

“ "To advance U.S. security interests, the United States should agree to bilateral negotiations. It should press North Korea to suspend further nuclear and missile tests while negotiations on normalization proceed, freeze plutonium production and make a firm, timebound commitment to return to the six-party talks."

”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Economic sanctions should be placed on North Korea on the topic North Korean nuclear crisis.

This item argues for the position United States should negotiate with North Korea on the topic North Korean nuclear crisis.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=In_a_Test,_a_Reason_to_Talk&oldid=3666"

This page was last edited on October 10, 2006, at 16:29.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.