2006 transatlantic aircraft plot / Great Britain should torture terror suspects for information

< 2006 transatlantic aircraft plot

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

Position: Great Britain should torture terror suspects for information

This position addresses the topic 2006 transatlantic aircraft plot.

For this position
No results
Against this position
No results

Mixed on this position

"Despite the fact that we may all turn out to be very grateful that there are other nations less morally fastidious than we are, no one wants to make torture legal, still less to have it part of anti-terrorism policy in Britain. A willingness to use the results of torture, but not to get involved in it directly, is not morally consistent."

From If torture could stop a terrorist atrocity and save thousands of lives, would it really be so wrong?, by Alasdair Palmer (The Daily Telegraph, August 20, 2006) (view)

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=2006_transatlantic_aircraft_plot_/_Great_Britain_should_torture_terro r suspects for information&oldid=2576"

This page was last edited on August 24, 2006, at 00:14.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.