AG Rob McKenna has a case to challenge the health-care law's individual mandate

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The Seattle Times editorial board

Source The Seattle Times

Date March 26, 2010

URL http://seattletimes.nwsource.com/html/editorials/2011453136 edit28mckenna.html

Quote

"The law calls its mandate a tax. But if you comply, your money goes to the insurance company. You pay the government only if you don't comply — which means, McKenna says, "It's not a tax. It's a fine." We think McKenna has a good case, and one the progressives who condemn him ought to appreciate."

"

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item takes a mixed stance on the position Act should not have been passed on the topic Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Retrieved from

 $"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=AG_Rob_McKenna_has_a_case_to_challenge_the_health-care_law\%27 s_individual_mandate&oldid=11664"$

This page was last edited on April 1, 2010, at 20:29.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.