

Amy Coney Barrett truly shines under fire in Senate hearings

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) New York Post editorial board

Source New York Post

Date October 13, 2020

URL <https://nypost.com/2020/10/13/amy-coney-barrett-truly-shines-under-fire-in-senate-hearings/>

Quote

“ In two days of Senate hearings, Amy Coney Barrett has already shown she has the right temperament — and legal chops — to serve on the Supreme Court: She isn't ruffled or distracted by hostile questions but sticks like glue to the facts and the law. At the same time, Democrats have shown they have no good reason to reject her: Their toughest line of attack has been to suggest she might not vote the way they'd like on an ObamaCare case or if the election comes before the high court. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position Barrett should be confirmed on the topic Amy Coney Barrett Supreme Court nomination.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Amy_Coney_Barrett_truly_shines_under_fire_in_Senate_hearings&oldid=32089"

This page was last edited on October 26, 2020, at 19:38.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.