

Don't touch my junk

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Charles Krauthammer

Source The Washington Post

Date November 19, 2010

URL <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/11/18/AR2010111804494.html>

Quote

“ This has nothing to do with safety - 95 percent of these inspections, searches, shoe removals and pat-downs are ridiculously unnecessary. The only reason we continue to do this is that people are too cowed to even question the absurd taboo against profiling - when the profile of the airline attacker is narrow, concrete, uniquely definable and universally known. So instead of seeking out terrorists, we seek out tubes of gel in stroller pouches.” ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position New procedures are justified on the topic TSA airport screening procedures controversy.

This item argues for the position Profiling should be used instead on the topic TSA airport screening procedures controversy.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Don%27t_touch_my_junk&oldid=13441"

This page was last edited on November 22, 2010, at 20:00.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.