

North Korea and the Bomb

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The New York Times editorial board

Source The New York Times

Date October 10, 2006

URL <http://www.nytimes.com/2006/10/10/opinion/10tue1.html>

Quote

“When told they were enabling their neighbor's nuclear ambitions, Chinese diplomats blithely insisted that the North was likely bluffing about having a weapon. Now, Washington, Tokyo, Moscow and others have to make clear that China will be judged by its willingness to confront this problem. The Security Council must also make clear that it is still demanding the complete dismantlement of Pyongyang's nuclear weapons program. For that, negotiations are the only hope.”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position China should pressure North Korea to give up its nuclear ambitions on the topic North Korean nuclear crisis.

This item argues for the position United States should negotiate with North Korea on the topic North Korean nuclear crisis.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=North_Korea_and_the_Bomb&oldid=3654"

This page was last edited on October 10, 2006, at 14:55.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.