Quote

“ The Association of American Medical Colleges projects that two years from now — 18 months into the ObamaCare era — there will be a shortage of 30,000 primary care doctors, ballooning to nearly 70,000 within a decade. The likelihood of ever catching up seems slim. Mr. Packham’s research found that primary care visits in Nevada could surge by as many as 280,000 appointments per year under ObamaCare. ”
