

Obscure Court Decision Gives Government Sweeping Power

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Thomas Sowell

Source Investor's Business Daily

Date March 26, 2012

URL <http://news.investors.com/article/605667/201203261842/supreme-court-precedent-gives-government-dictatorial-powers.htm>

Quote

“ No doubt people who are tired or drowsy are more likely to run through a red light than people who are rested and alert. But does that mean local governments should have the power to order people when to go to bed and get up, because their tiredness can have an effect on the likelihood of their driving through a red light? The power to regulate indirect effects is not a slippery slope. It is the disastrous loss of freedom that lies at the bottom of a slippery slope. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position Act is unconstitutional on the topic Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Obscure_Court_Decision_Gives_Government_Sweeping_Power&oldid=15347"

This page was last edited on March 28, 2012, at 11:35.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.