

Responding to Syrian Atrocities

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The New York Times editorial board

Source The New York Times

Date August 26, 2013

URL <http://www.nytimes.com/2013/08/27/opinion/responding-to-syrian-atrocities.html>

Quote

“ If Mr. Obama does forgo the U.N., he will need strong endorsements from the Arab League and the European Union, and more countries than just Turkey, Britain and France should join the effort. And if he does proceed with military action, it should be carefully targeted at Syrian air assets and military units involved in chemical weapons use. This, too, will not be easy, but the aim is to punish Mr. Assad for slaughtering his people with chemical arms, not to be drawn into another civil war. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position A coalition of countries should intervene on the topic Syrian civil war.

This item argues against the position United States should depose Bashar Assad on the topic Syrian civil war.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Responding_to_Syrian_Atrocities&oldid=16852"

This page was last edited on September 2, 2013, at 02:39.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.