The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s)	The Washington Times editorial board
Source	The Washington Times
Date	November 20, 2010
URL	http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2010/nov/20/tsas-security-charade/
Quote	66 "A more likely explanation is that the Obama administration is engaging in a classic form of bureaucratic backside covering. Should another Islamic extremist board an aircraft while TSA agents are busy grabbing sippy cups from toddlers and confiscating fingernail clippers from Marines, the agency plausibly can claim there was nothing more it could have done. After all, with nude photography sessions and stories of nuns and 3-year-olds being groped, TSA has made it clear it has crossed every line of common decency - even laws governing sexual assault."	,,

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position New procedures are justified on the topic TSA airport screening procedures controversy.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=TSA%27s_security_charade&oldid=13443"

This page was last edited on November 22, 2010, at 20:21.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.