

The bailout falters: A market alternative

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Pittsburgh Tribune-Review editorial board

Source Pittsburgh Tribune-Review

Date September 30, 2008

URL http://www.pittsburghlive.com/x/pittsburghtrib/opinion/archive/s_590746.html

Quote

“ Republicans and Democrats sent a strong message Monday in rejecting the U.S. Treasury's plan to put up, if need be, $700 billion to take bad debt off Wall Street's ledger. While it was a well-intentioned move to inject some confidence in the American financial system and forestall greater market deterioration, it left the horrible taste of dirigisme -- economic planning and control by the state -- in the mouths of too many.” ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position United States should bail out the banking industry on the topic Economic crisis of 2008.

This item argues for the position Act should be repealed on the topic Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=The_bailout_falters:_A_market_alternative&oldid=8127"

This page was last edited on September 30, 2008, at 18:16.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.