

We Can Put More Forces in Iraq...

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Frederick W. Kagan

Source The Weekly Standard

Date November 23, 2006

URL <http://weeklystandard.com/Content/Public/Articles/000/000/012/994zsofb.asp>

Quote

“The U.S. military has never set itself the goal of establishing and maintaining security. It has always prioritized training Iraqi forces and allowing them to undertake such operations on their own. This strategy might have had some merit when the principal problem in Iraq was the Sunni Arab insurgency (although it was dubious even then). It has little or no merit today, when sectarian violence is the most important challenge.”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position United States should change its approach on the topic Post-invasion Iraq.

This item argues for the position United States should increase troop levels on the topic Post-invasion Iraq.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=We_Can_Put_More_Forces_in_Iraq...&oldid=3959"

This page was last edited on November 24, 2006, at 19:14.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.