

Why gutting net neutrality protections is bad for N.J.

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Frank Pallone Jr.

Source The Star-Ledger

Date December 7, 2017

URL http://www.nj.com/opinion/index.ssf/2017/12/pallone_gutting_net_neutrality_protections_is_bad.html

Quote

“ Without net neutrality rules, large corporate interests could also choke off conversations or content they don't like while speeding up the content they do. Imagine what would happen to the House of Independents if their customers had to pay a premium anytime they wanted to discover new music or if the artists had to pay more to get their videos to work. They would be at a steep disadvantage. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Net neutrality should be repealed on the topic Net neutrality in the United States.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Why_gutting_net_neutrality_protections_is_bad_for_N.J.&oldid=29476"

This page was last edited on December 25, 2017, at 18:01.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.