

With doublespeaking France, honor gets lost in translation

---

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Jules Crittenden

Source Boston Herald

Date August 20, 2006

URL <http://news.bostonherald.com/columnists/view.bg?articleid=153613>

Quote

“ The shamelessness of France knows no bounds. They have a domestic Arabic population and business interests in the Mideast to satisfy. They desperately want to be taken seriously as a major power. So they sat down with the United States and hammered out a peace plan. Then, before the ink was dry, they shrugged a Gallic shrug.”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position France should commit more troops on the topic 2006 Israel-Lebanon conflict.

---

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=With\_doublespeaking\_France,\_honor\_gets\_lost\_in\_translation&oldid=2507"

---

This page was last edited on August 23, 2006, at 04:00.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.